State School Commissioner.

Member Board of Public Works.

The basis of representation to said convention is, one delegate for each 500 or each fraction of 250 or even of the number of votes cast for Grover Clevelaud for President in 1802. All the delegates to the State Convention shall be individually selected by the several counties and reported to the Committee on Credentials, as mass delegations will not be recognized.

The Democrats of each and every county are requested to select their local committee and report the same to the Chairman of the State Central Commistee on or before Sept. 1st. This report should include the names and P.O. addresses of each precinct and ward Commisteeman, and the name and P.O. addresses of each precinct and ward Commisteeman, and the name and P. O. address of the Chairman and Secretary of the Executive or Campaign Committee for the ensuing year.

In the sonvention, each county will be entitled to the following representation: FIFTH DISTRICT.

THE day of better times has come. This fact is being voiced by business men all over the country. Business is beginning to revive, the financial condition is improving and there is a palpable quickening of industrial activity. The agitation and suspense that have hung over the country for twelve months have disappeared. The uncertainty that prevailed touching tariff questions has been dispelled. John W. Bookwalter, manufacturer, schol-ar and capitalist is always an interesting talker on public topics. He was the Demo-talker on public topics. He was the Demo-cratic candidate for governor of Ohio against Foster in 1879. He now resides in New York. Speaking of the remedy for our financial trouble, Mr. Bookwalter says:

"What we need most in America, is a system of small bonds for the people. Who now owns Government securi ies? None but the rich. The poor people who want bonds cannot afford them and cannot get at them. Let ne have a system like the French them. Let us have a system like the French have—a system by which 17,000,000 French people hold Government bonds—rentes they are called in France.

financially. They may change their system of rule from monarchy to republic and back again, but the financial stability of France remains. Let the poorer classes have bonds and you will have no more talk about 'bloat-ed bondholders,' no more Anarchistic rant-ing about the rich and privileged classes. "In England the postal savings system is nearly as good as the French system of rentes, and both could be successfully copied

The system might not be pleasing to the bankers, but they are few compared to the millions of people who would rejoice at such an institution. Every post office should be an agency for the sale of such bonds, so that people in the remote districts could have the same advantage as those in the cities."
Talking of silver Mr. Bookwalter announced himself squarely in favor of bimetallism, Silver, he says, has gone hand in hand with gold since the beginning of time, and will continue so. Again he refers to France with more silver than gold in actual circulation, and cites her magnificent financial condition as an argument against the enemies of silver and the monometallists.

A Peculiar Domestic Scene In a German Saloon In New York.

There is a popular German restaurant and saloon on upper Third avenue which is much frequented by families living in the neighborhood. The saloon is separate from the restaurant proper. The cooking is very good, and the prices are very reasonable, and as a result the proprietor has grown wealthy. An odd and interesting feature of this resort is the family dinner, which occurs about 7 o'clock every evening. The family consists of the big, broad shouldered host; his small, angular wife; a jolly sister-in-law; three little girls, a small boy, and a governess whose fea tures clearly indicate her New England origin. They all sit down together at a long table, which is placed not in the restaurant, but in the center of the sa loon. All around are tables at which sit jolly revelers, and frequently during the dinner hour a crowd stands leaning against the bar.

The family does not seem to mind the saloon surroundings, and, in fact, rarely does any one of them glance up fron the table. The only interruptions are when some of the habitual frequenters come up to talk with the host or his wife. The children chatter and carry on just as though they were in a pri vate dining room. It gives a homelike and domestic air to the saloon which probably could not be duplicated in any other hostelry on Manhattan Island. The only person who seems to be ill at ease is the Yankee governess.-New York Sun.

Oratory and Wit.

"A curious thing about political oratory and wit is the side light I got upon one aspect of it years ago in Buffalo." Thus Mr. Cleveland is quoted by a listener. "One morning a quaint looking old chap came into my office and said that he had read in the newspapers that I was to speak at a mass meeting the following night and wanted to know if it were true. When I told him that it was so, he revealed to me a new method of gaining oratorical distinction. He volunteered to interrupt my speech at stated intervals with a remark that should be agreed upon between us. To this interjection I was to retort wittily, and thus, as the old fellow pointed out, I would acquire a reputation as a witty speaker. "My first impression was that he was amusing himself at my expense, but he repeated to me several things I could reply to wittily and wanted me to pay him roundly for helping me to a reputation. But I told him I was indifferent to that kind of fame, and he went away disappointed. Not very long after that I was seated on a stage listening to a speaker, when who should arise in the audience but my quaint visitor and bawl out one of the very things he wanted me to pay him for interrupting me with. The crator answered him with the same retort that I was offered the privilege of making, and the andience exploded into laughter, and I heartily joined in, but my amusement had not the same foundation, I fancy, as that of the rest of the laughers. And during made an occasional interruption from different parts of the house, and the retorts were of the same manufactured sort. I am a trifle skeptical now on the subject of witty retorts."-Cincinnati Commercial.
